Essex based painter, Rebecca Cox, has been mindfully painting for more than twenty years. She studied Fine Art at Middlesex University (1997-1999) but left her studies to live between India and the South of France, on the trail of the free party scene of the 90s. On returning to the UK, Rebecca completed her masters at the University of Hertfordshire and now works as an art psychotherapist for the NHS.

Rebecca plays with scale and the tension between freedom and constraint to create bold but intricate and absorbing works. She explores the space where process and product meet and the therapeutic qualities of art and its making.
